

THE Carolina

South- Gazette.

September 5th, 1754.

[NUMB. 1055.]

H A G U E, May 20.

A Courier from London has passed by here, for Hanover, who, it's said, carries advice, that his Britannic majesty intends to go thither this summer.

London, June 6. Last Saturday orders were given by the commissioners of the customs, to the masters of private vessels trading to and from Holland, France, and Flanders, not to bring any letters from any of those places, on penalty of being severely punished.

London, June 8. By letters from France, we are informed, that Mons^r l'abbé Barthelemi, of the academy of inscriptions and belle lettres, has communicated to the academy a curious dissertation, which will soon be published, upon the Palmyrene language, of which he has discover'd the alphabet. He gives entirely the honour of this discovery, which may be of the greatest importance to Oriental literature, to the late English travellers, Mr. Dawkins and Mr. Wood, whose scrupulous accuracy in the inscriptions they have published, has furnish'd him with proper materials.

Leghorn, May 12. The incursion which the Corsicans lately made into the province of Balagna, was attended with great mischief. They carried off Giuliani, the son of the chief of that name, with several of his party, and detained some of the principal inhabitants of Balagna by way of hostages. After this they returned to Corte, where they confined their prisoners in dark caves under ground, and other dismal places, for some days, and then obliged them to cast lots which of them should be shot, and many were executed in consequence of this decision.

Genoa, May 14. The letters received by the last post from Spain advise, that the military dispositions in Catalonia, and in the other maritime provinces of that monarchy, are diligently pursued; but people cannot yet penetrate the real intention of those preparations. Most of the regiments which were in the interior parts of the kingdom have been assembled towards the coast, where they form a sort of line, which extends from the neighbourhood of Barcelona to the confines of Andalusia.

Marseilles, May 16. The ship Concord is arrived here from Algiers, having brought home Mr. le Maire, his majesty's consul there, and 19 of the crew of Capt. Prepaud, who died at Algiers of the barbarous treatment he met with. The release of the 19 persons is all the satisfaction that can be obtained from the dey, who absolutely persists in refusing to restore Capt. Prepaud's vessel; nor is there any possibility of bringing these barbarians to reason, 'till the squadron of M. de la Galissoniere pays them a visit, which it is thought he will soon do, as the last letters from Toulon inform us it was to sail yesterday. Some people pretend that the Algerines expect this squadron, and are determined to give no satisfaction 'till they are obliged to it; and that it is upon this account that the consul came home, fearing, that if he staid at Algiers 'till the French fleet arrived before the port, it might be difficult for him to escape the fury of the populace. The merchants of this province are extremely desirous to see an accommodation, that the corn trade to Africa may be opened again, which has lately been much interrupted.

CHARLES-TOWN, Sept. 5.

The General Assembly of this Province is now sitting, on the Subject of the last Express from Virginia.

On Friday last arrived a Company of COMEDIANS, from Philadelphia.

Capt. Thomas Betson, late Master of a Snow belonging to London, which was run ashore and lost on the Coast of Africa about two Years ago, by the Negroes she had on board, is arrived here in Capt. Calgubens, from Sierra Leon.
